

Geography

Our mission in geography is to foster children's enthusiasm for the subject through practical learning opportunities, which broaden their knowledge and understanding, while providing them with the necessary skills.

From a young age, I have always been very passionate about geography. For several years, I have been heavily involved in Girlguiding, where I was a Rainbow leader. From this, I have had the opportunity to grow my geographical interest through outdoor exploration, including the completion of my Queen's Guide award, where I had to use my fieldwork skills to lead a group on an expedition. I feel as though my interest and experience in this subject enables me to lead with passion and expertise.

I am sure that through studying geography at West Rainton, our children will develop a passion for this subject through our engaging teaching methods and practical sessions. Within our geography lessons, we frequently use our age appropriate range of atlases and globes to ensure children from all year groups gain knowledge of significant global locations. I am positive that every child will develop an understanding of geographical skills and fieldwork, including map reading, using a compass and interpreting different types of maps. As well as this, each child will leave our school with a good knowledge of a range of areas in the world and different cultures.
