

History

Our mission in history is to foster children's enthusiasm for the subject through practical learning opportunities, which broaden their knowledge and understanding, while providing them with the necessary skills.

From a young age, I have always been extremely passionate about history. Whilst at secondary school, I studied history and ancient history to A level, where my interest continued to expand across all areas of history, from Ancient Rome to World War II. My interest has continued to grow and I enjoy furthering my knowledge in various historical eras.

I believe that through studying history at West Rainton, our children will develop a love of the subject through our engaging teaching methods and practical sessions, which involve artefacts from different eras. I am positive that every child will develop an understanding of key historical skills, including historical enquiry, chronology, reliability and significance. As well as this, each child will develop a good knowledge and understanding of a different civilisations from various time periods and how they influenced the world today. Our ambitious curriculum ensures that our children leave us with a secure understanding of not only key historical events, but also those from our local area. Through our enthusiastic teaching and sharing of possible career opportunities, I hope that our children will follow their passion into future study or careers in history.
